Guillaume Farel: An Introduction to His Theology (Texts and Studies in Religion) Henri Heyer

A translation of Henri Heyer's thesis for his licensure, originally written in 1872, which seeks to present a major portrait of Guillaume Farel (1489-1565). The author takes issue with the pervasive interpretation that Farel was a zealot rather than a theologian. In contrast, on the basis of largely unpublished sources, Heyer provides a critique of Farel's theological development both before and after his encounter with Calvin, arguing that he was a systematic thinker who did in fact provide well-articulated doctrines of the Trinity, baptism, predestination, and Communion.
